English Language Proficiency

Section 1 Vocabulary: This test measures your vocabulary. You will be asked to choose the correct meaning of a word or select the word that best fits in a sentence. Read each question carefully and choose the most appropriate answer.

Example:

Phrase 1/15

the state of being rich

Select a word that matches each phrase.

spending

assistant payment

wealth

gesture

counter

Continue

Answer: The phrase "the state of being rich" refers to someone having a lot of money, assets, or valuable possessions. This condition is best described by the word:

- Wealth – This directly means having a large amount of money or valuable resources. It perfectly matches "the state of being rich."

Please answer another example:

Phrase 2/15

a person who helps someone

Select a word that matches each phrase.

assistant

payment

gesture

wealth

spending

LEVEL 2

Section 2 Grammar: The test will provide a paragraph with missing words. You need to fill in the blanks with the correct words to complete each sentence accurately. Read the paragraph carefully and choose the best option for each blank.

Example:

Passage 1/2

Positive and Normative Economics

Believing that people tend to make sound financial decisions, positive economists try to make predictions based on history. In other words, they assume that what happened in the past is likely to happen in the future. Positive economists develop Blank 1 predictions for our economic future based on the causes and effects of human behaviour. These economists develop "fact-based" economic theories Blank 2 a psychological approach. Some may suggest that this Blank 3 of positive economics is based on more realistic criteria since it mainly looks at what people have done in the past. Those who take a more speculative approach to economics, called normative economists, are willing to take less predictable variables into account, such as value judgements. This branch of economics is Blank 4 commonly referred to as the more conditional approach, since it bases its predictions on hypothetical situations. Both positive and normative economics can be Blank 5 in the development of economic policy.

Select the word or phrase that best fits the sentence.

Options for Blank 1:

every any speculative our their

Answer: In the context of positive economics, the correct word to fill the blank is "speculative."

Here's why:

- Positive economics focuses on objective analysis and the prediction of future events based on observable data and historical facts. They aim to predict economic outcomes without making judgments about whether those outcomes are desirable or undesirable.
- The word "speculative" refers to making predictions or forming theories about the future, based on available data and assumptions. Although positive economists base their predictions on facts, they still involve some degree of speculation about future events, as we can never be 100% sure of the outcomes.

Section 3 Reading Comprehension: Read the paragraph below carefully and make sure to note the important details. After reading, check the questions below the paragraph, which are related to the topic. Be mindful of your time to ensure you complete the test within the given limits.

Passage:

Small Businesses

A lot of people prefer to work in companies with less than fifty employees. These companies are classified as "small businesses" not only because they have fewer employees, but because they earn relatively small annual revenues. Other considerations used to describe small businesses include logistical methods, sales figures, and gross or net revenues. People who run small businesses, such as bakers, shopkeepers, hair stylists, or suppliers selling tools and electrical equipment are often sole proprietors. These business owners run retail operations or offer services, such as web design or print or photography studios. Professional practices, including those run by doctors, lawyers, or accountants, may also qualify as small businesses. Small businesses vary a great deal in terms of size, revenues, and regulatory authorization. For example, running a home accounting business may only require a business license. Other small businesses, such as day care facilities or restaurants serving alcohol, may be more heavily regulated or require governmental inspections and certifications. After spending time working for a large corporation, some people may find starting one's own small business a viable option.

How is a small business defined in the text?

Small businesses ...

- A. are the only type of businesses some people are allowed to run.
- B. employ fewer than fifty people with less annual income than larger firms.
- C. have to follow stricter regulations and be certified by authorities.
- D. involve many professional people, such as doctors, accountants, and lawyers.

✓ Answer: The correct answer is: employ fewer than fifty people with less annual income than larger firms.

Explanation:

The text defines small businesses by several characteristics, with a particular focus on the number of employees and annual revenues. Specifically, small businesses are described as having:

- Fewer than fifty employees (this directly matches the description given).
- Relatively small annual revenues compared to larger firms.

Typing Test

This test measures your typing speed in words per minute. The passing score is 30 words per minute. You can practice online by searching for typing test websites through any browser. Make sure to focus on the accuracy of your words. If a word appears in red, it means the word you typed is incorrect.
